Mark Hiby enjoys a smoke before classes

So, what is life? A madness. What is life? An illusion, a shadow, a story. And the greatest good is little enough: for all life is a puzzle, and puzzles themselves are only puzzles. (taken from Pedro Calderon de la Barra.)

The Juniors: So close, yet so far. Wanting to break out of the high school puzzle, but in a way, not wanting to. With only a year to go, they have yet to experience the SAT's, ACH's, career choices, and college applications. But, with patience, they will be able to handle these puzzles, and more, with no problems.

This year's frazzled Trail staff consisted of activities editors Allison Smith and Liz Mahler, academics editors Darlene Rho and Andrea Palumbo, sports editors Chris Demareski and Lisa Gillingham, undergraduate editor Katie Cullen, faculty editors Mary Jo Murphy and Maureen Pribula, senior section editors Jennifer Prochazka and Chris Miller, ads/funds/and-everything-else editors Rosanna Fusco and Jane Benkoski, Jonathan Kus, index editor editors-in-chief Bill MacLehose and Jenny Hengen, and most importantly an able-bodied crew. Ms. Haness and Mr. Guadagnino gave a great deal of free time and a lot of good advice. Although we frequently let things slide to the last minute, and spent a number of late Sunday nights around the dining room table, we ordered out Chinese and perserved.

He'll have help from Cathy and Caren Hector who are very good servers. Also from Lillian Checchio and Mary Badgley two excellent setters and from the diggers, Leslie Klinker and Christine Fosko. Help will be needed from all the team's members to beat Columbia and Summit.

The boys tennis team looks optimistic this year. There is a lot of new talent, but mixed with senior veteran Karl Schultz's experience and other returing players, the team should do well. The hope of this year's team is to beat last year's record, in which they broke even. Their first match in the Mountain Valley Conference is April 2. This should prove to be a challenging and exciting season for the boys tennis team.

In an era of budget deficits, declining enrollment and national criticism of academic standards, New Providence High School continues to be one of the leading New Jersey high schools. This is primarily due to caring parents who want the best for their kids. But the "system" also works, thanks to the efforts of the administration and the Board of Education. As a tribute to the time and effort they have devoted to us, we dedicate this page to: principal Jean Masters-Juris, Vice-Principal Harry Powers, Superintendent Robert Lachenauer, Assistant Superintendent Robert Gordon, and Board of Education members: President Patricia McDonald, Vice President Gloria Badgley, Robert McLaughlin, Edmond Morrison, Peter Crichton, and Thomas Reilly.
